Dr Edward S. Judd, Jr, Rochester, Minnesota native and son of well-known Mayo Clinic physician, E. Starr Judd, MD, (1878-1935) was another member of the first Editorial Board for Mayo Clinic Proceedings.

Born October 16, 1911, Dr Judd specialized in surgery. He attended Dartmouth College in Hanover, New Hampshire, receiving his BA in 1932, and attended Medical School at Rush Medical College, University of Chicago, where he obtained his MD degree in 1936. He completed his internship at Geisinger Memorial Hospital in Danville, Pennsylvania, from 1936 to 1937, and attended Mayo Graduate School of Medical Education, graduating with an MS degree from the University of Minnesota in Surgery in 1940. His professional interests surrounded gastrointestinal tract and head and neck surgery.¹ He published extensively throughout many medical journals, including 14 articles in Mayo Clinic Proceedings in issues ranging from 1947 to 1955.²

In addition to being a charter member of the first Mayo Clinic Proceedings Editorial Board, Dr Judd obtained the rank of professor in 1957, served as president of the Mayo Clinic staff in 1970, and was president of the Central Surgical Society. He retired from active practice in 1976, and died on September 8, 1996.¹
